

MORNING APPEAL.

Tuesday.....February 22 1887.

AN ECCLESIASTICAL LOTTERY.

The Argonaut favors a lottery for California to keep the money at home, and prints the following:

Every newspaper in the city advertises lottery drawings. The Call and Chronicle are just now in lively competition over the prize announcement, and the Call, with that fearless enterprise which characterizes all its business operations, has distanced its rival with 44,298 daily circulation, by causing the prize list of the Louisiana Lottery to be telegraphed from the city of New Orleans. Scarcely a week passes that some individual charity does not make its appeal for the sale of tickets for some article to be raffled off. Every holy Mother Church goes regularly into the business. The last effort in this direction comes to us from Bally-Jamesduff, Ireland, in aid of a convent school, and is under the immediate patronage of the Lord Bishop of Kilmore, the most reverend Dr. Bernard Finegan. It is announced to be a "Grand Bazar and Drawing of Prizes." The series of tickets held by us, sent gratuitously and in part of this first-class notice, is numbered 979,903, so we presume that one million of tickets were issued at twenty-five cents each. The following letter from the good Bishop Finegan accompanies the ticket:

CULLIES HOUSE, Cavin, June 23, '86.
It is with much pleasure that the first charity I have to recommend to the faithful at home and abroad, since I became bishop, is that of the Convent of Bally-Jamesduff. The community, one of the most excellent in Ireland, and worthy of the holy time of St. Bridget, has contracted a heavy debt in the erection of a convent and schools. With confidence they appeal to the never failing generosity of the children of St. Patrick at home and abroad, to those who love the old land, its faith and religious institutions so dearly. All who contribute will have merit for providing a home for the spouses of Christ, will participate in the graces given to them, and will partake of the reward of the saintly lives led by them, and will have prayers said and masses offered for their spiritual and temporal welfare on earth, and to the end of time for their repose and everlasting happiness.

† BERNARD FINEGAN,
Bishop of Kilmore.

Then the good Sister Patrick McEamrney writes us the following confidential note, which we publish that all may know where to send the money:

J. M. F. C.
CONVENT OF POOR CLARES,
Bally-Jamesduff, Virginia, Ireland.
MY DEAR SIR: Our reverend bishop, the Most Rev. Dr. Finegan, knowing the heavy burden of debt that presses upon us, advocates our cause with the charitable in the accompanying letter. Your response to that appeal in disposing of these tickets among your friends will never be forgotten by us. We undertook a heavy debt for the sake of two hundred poor children, erecting for them a school wherein we can educate and prepare them for the many dangers they must meet at home and in foreign lands. Sixteen times each year the Holy Sacrifice will be offered for you in perpetuity.

By a special vow we devote our lives to the gratuitous care and instruction of poor female children, especially orphans. The more destitute we feed and clothe. Our Holy Father the Pope has given his apostolic benediction to all who aid our work.

I am yours respectfully in J. and M.

Sister Mary Patrick McEamrney.
We would suggest that our Legislature now in session introduce an amendment to the Constitution, and when secured, pass a law authorizing a California lottery, so that we may keep our money at home. We do not think lotteries immoral, or in any wise objectionable, if mining, farming, city libraries, church fairs, and sacred convents for the care of orphan girls are to be promoted by lotteries, if they are sanctioned by the commercial community, the preachers, and the successors of the apostles, why not legalize them, and throw the benefits to be derived to the whole community? It does not seem quite fair to permit the reverend clergy of Ireland, the ladies of Bally-Jamesduff, and the Lord Bishop of Kilmore to pursue this game of chance, while the Argonaut is risking its property and periling the liberty of its editor by advertising it.

HOW CAN YOU STOP IT?

The moral abhorrents of the Lottery bill say that there is no trouble to enforce the law against selling lottery tickets by closing up the agencies. How will this stop it? All you have to do then is to enclose a dollar bill in an envelope and get the ticket by return mail. The Postmaster of this city says that the letters directed to the New Orleans Lottery increase every week. It is claimed that the Postmaster General has issued orders to confiscate all letters addressed to the New Orleans Lottery Company. Since the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States recognizing the legal status of the New Orleans Lottery Company the Postmaster General has not dared to touch a letter. If he should enforce his ruling anyone could send money to the three leading banks in New Orleans who cash the prizes and get the tickets all the same. Pass the Lottery bill and then pass another Act compelling lottery agents to pay a quarterly license in advance and the revenue of the State would be still further increased.
